A Comparative Study on Translations of Daily and Banquet Menus

A thesis submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Arts in Translation Studies by

U Man Ieng, Mandy

Supervisor: Professor Zhang Meifang

University of Macao

September 2011
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Declaration........................................................................................................................................i

Acknowledgements ....................................................................................................................ii

Abstract.......................................................................................................................................iii

List of Abbreviations................................................................................................................iv

I. INTRODUCTION ..................................................................................................................1

1.1 Background of the research .........................................................................................1

1.2 Menu, Culture, and Menu Translation ......................................................................2

1.3 Research questions.......................................................................................................3

1.4 Aims and procedures of the research ........................................................................3

II. LITERATURE REVIEW ......................................................................................................4

2.1 Definitions of Culture .................................................................................................4

2.2 Lawrence Venuti’s Domestication and Foreignization Translation Theory...............4

2.3 Hervey and Higgins’ suggestions on Cultural Translation .......................................7

2.4 Previous Studies on Chinese dish name translation ..................................................9

III. METHODOLOGY ..............................................................................................................11

3.1 Data and Criteria for Data Collection .......................................................................11

3.2 Categorization of Daily menu and Banquet menu .................................................12

3.3 Data Analysis Methods ..............................................................................................12

IV. AN ANALYSIS OF TWO HUNDRED DISH NAME TRANSLATIONS ....14

4.1 ST analysis ....................................................................................................................14

4.1.1 ST of Daily Dish Names ......................................................................................14
DECLARATION

I declare that this thesis represents my own work, except where due acknowledgment is made, and that it has not been previously included in a thesis, dissertation or report submitted to this University or to any other institution for a degree, diploma or other qualification.

U Man Ieng, Mandy
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This thesis would not have been possible without the support and guidance of several people who extended their valuable assistance in the preparation and completion of my study.

First and foremost, I am heartily thankful to my supervisor, Professor Zhang Meifang, whose guidance, support and encouragement from the start to the end of my thesis enabled me to develop an understanding of the topic. I will never forget your inspiration as I tackled all the difficulties in the completion.

Secondly, I would like to offer my heartfelt gratitude to Dr. Hari Venkatesan whose sincerity and encouragement I will never forget. I would like to offer my thankful to Dr. Vincent Wang, Dr. James Li and Dr. Victoria Lei, for sharing their insights that enlightened me and broadened my knowledge. I can feel their great passion in translation.

Thirdly, I am grateful to my family and friends, especially my parents, for their continuous tolerance and support. In addition, I would like to give my regard to Jack, Man Kit, Man In, Althea, Dan, Phi Phi, Doreen, Juliana, Shirley, Cat, Maggie, Sandra, Ange, Ellen, Candy, Chon Leong, Bonnie, Celia, Alice, Nicole, Annie, Eva, Serena, Elvina, Silvia, Mr. Kou, Ivy, Bel, Liza, Carlos, Gary and Sara Farr, for their support, assistance and suggestions with my thesis.

Lastly, I would like to offer my wishes and blessings to all of those who supported me in all aspects during the completion of my thesis. Thank you very much.
ABSTRACT

Macao has developed into a cosmopolitan city attracting more foreign tourists, many of whom are fascinated by the Chinese culture, or simply by its cuisine. Although Macao is an international city, many foreigners are dumbfounded when they read the translated Chinese dish names in some Chinese restaurants in Macao. Poor translations of Chinese dish names mislead foreigners. Our pilot study shows that Chinese dish names do not simply show the various ingredients, taste, fragrance, color, etc., but also carry plenty of cultural elements. Therefore, as translators, it is vital to translate the Chinese menus correctly. Since marriages between Chinese and foreigners have become more common, banquet menus are designed with English translations, too. Daily menu and banquet menu translations are different in many ways due to the impact of cultural factors. The present study collected a number of Daily and Banquet menus from 10 famous restaurants and hotels in Macao. 200 dish names from the collected menus were classified into different categories and analyzed for better elaboration. A comparative study was conducted on translations of Daily and Banquet menus from a cultural perspective. By doing this analysis, cultural differences between Daily and Banquet menus and the influence of cultural factors in the translation process were examined. In conjunction with it, translation strategies on domestication and foreignization and methods in translating dish names were investigated. This thesis tries to find whether there is a clear tendency towards using domestication in dealing with culturally loaded dish names. The findings indicate that the strategies of domestication and translation methods are mainly adopted in translating both Chinese Daily and Banquet menus into English. Some implications of the findings are also discussed.

Keywords
daily menu, banquet menu, comparative study, domestication, foreignization, translation strategies and methods
LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>SL</td>
<td>Source Language</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ST</td>
<td>Source Text</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TL</td>
<td>Target Language</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TT</td>
<td>Target Text</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LT</td>
<td>Literal Translation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DM</td>
<td>Daily Menus</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BM</td>
<td>Banquet Menus</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>